Sarah and Duck were watching a wildlife show about birds on their computer. A photographer was taking photos of a special bird that did a very funny dance!

They decided to go to the park and take some photos of birds, just like the man in the show. Sarah found her camera and off they went.

They spotted a pigeon sitting on a bench. CLICK! went Sarah's camera, but the noise made the pigeon fly away. Never mind, there were lots more birds to find.

Next, they found a woodpecker up in a tree. As they looked, Duck accidentally wandered into Sarah. "Careful, Duck!" she sighed, and when she looked, the woodpecker had flown away too.

CLICK! went the camera again... now Sarah had taken a picture of her shoes! Her shoes looked very nice, but what they really wanted was a picture of a bird.

Sarah and Duck still didn't have a single photo of a bird! They tip-toed up to a white dove sitting on the bandstand... when Scarf Lady arrived. "Helloooo!" she called and the dove flew away.

"We're photographing birds," Sarah explained to Scarf Lady, "but they keep flying away." "Why don't you take a picture of Duck?" said Scarf Lady, "He's a lovely bird!"

Smile,
Duck!

What a good idea, thought Sarah, and she took lots of brilliant pictures of Duck. Then she pressed a special button that would make the camera take a picture of them together all by itself.

As they smiled for the camera, a bird fluttered down that looked just like the one in the wildlife show. Sarah grabbed her camera and took lots and lots of pictures! This bird was very happy to have his picture taken too.

Look Duck, it's you!

When they got home, Sarah used her computer to print her photos. Duck helped her stick them in a photo album so they could have fun looking through them together.
